

Designing for High-Intent Actions

A Growth Redesign of the B2B Request for Quotes Funnel

The screenshot shows the europages website homepage with a dark green header and a white main content area. The header includes the europages logo, a 'Categories' icon, and navigation links for 'Request Hub' (underlined), 'Messages', 'My company', a user profile icon, and a 'GB' link. A banner at the top right states 'Trusted by 800,000+ European businesses'. The main headline reads 'Get quotes from Europe's top suppliers'. Below it is a search bar with the placeholder 'Search for products or services you need quotes for' and a 'Get Quotes →' button. A row of 'Popular searches' includes 'CNC Machining', 'Metal Fabrication', 'Laser Cutting', and '3D Printing'. The main content area features a section titled 'Popular products and services ready to quote' with four cards. Each card displays an image of a machine, the number of suppliers (e.g., 2,450+ suppliers), and a 'Get quotes now' button. The cards are: 1. Customized Design Desktop Mini 3030 4060 Cnc (2,450+ suppliers) 2. CNC machine to cut telgopor (Hot Wire) (450+ suppliers) 3. CNC machine to cut telgopor (Hot Wire) (1,150+ suppliers) 4. 6090 Small CNC 3d Engraving 4 axis Router wi... (50+ suppliers)

The Business Problem

Understanding the marketplace dynamics through a growth lens

RFQs are the core transaction europages marketplace. While traffic and RFQ clicks were strong, the marketplace was underperforming where it mattered most:

Low Quality

Too few verified, actionable RFQs

Poor Relevance

Suppliers receiving low-quality or irrelevant demand

Churn Risk

Early signs of supplier disengagement

Key Signals & Insights

Only ~12% of users who clicked "Request a Quote" completed a verified RFQ

The image shows a screenshot of the europages platform. At the top left is the europages logo. On the right side of the header are buttons for "Get quotes" and "Request". Below the header, there's a large circular graphic featuring a woman holding a tablet. To the left of this graphic is a callout box containing text and an icon. To the right is another callout box with text and an icon. At the bottom left, there are two statistics: "2.2M Registered suppliers" and "78,000 Requests processed". At the very bottom, there's a call-to-action button and some footer text.

Insight #2 - Buyers Didn't Know How to 'Succeed'

"RFQ felt like filling a generic form with no guidance on what suppliers actually needed. Result: vague, low-signal requests"

Insight #1 - No Persuasion Before Effort

Suppliers receiving low-quality or irrelevant demand

Share your request - get quotes fast

Insight #3 - Supplier Churn

Supplier feedback and commercial data showed low response rates to RFQs and perception of 'not enough serious buyers'. Early churn driven by low demand volume and low demand quality.

Growth Strategy & Key Design Moves

High-impact interventions focused on conversion and quality.

We broke one dense form into smaller, goal-oriented steps, with early stages focused on understanding user intent and context, and later stages capturing detailed specifications.

Persuasion

Make the value of submitting an RFQ obvious before asking for effort.

Intent Over Volume

Encourage fewer, but more motivated RFQ starts.

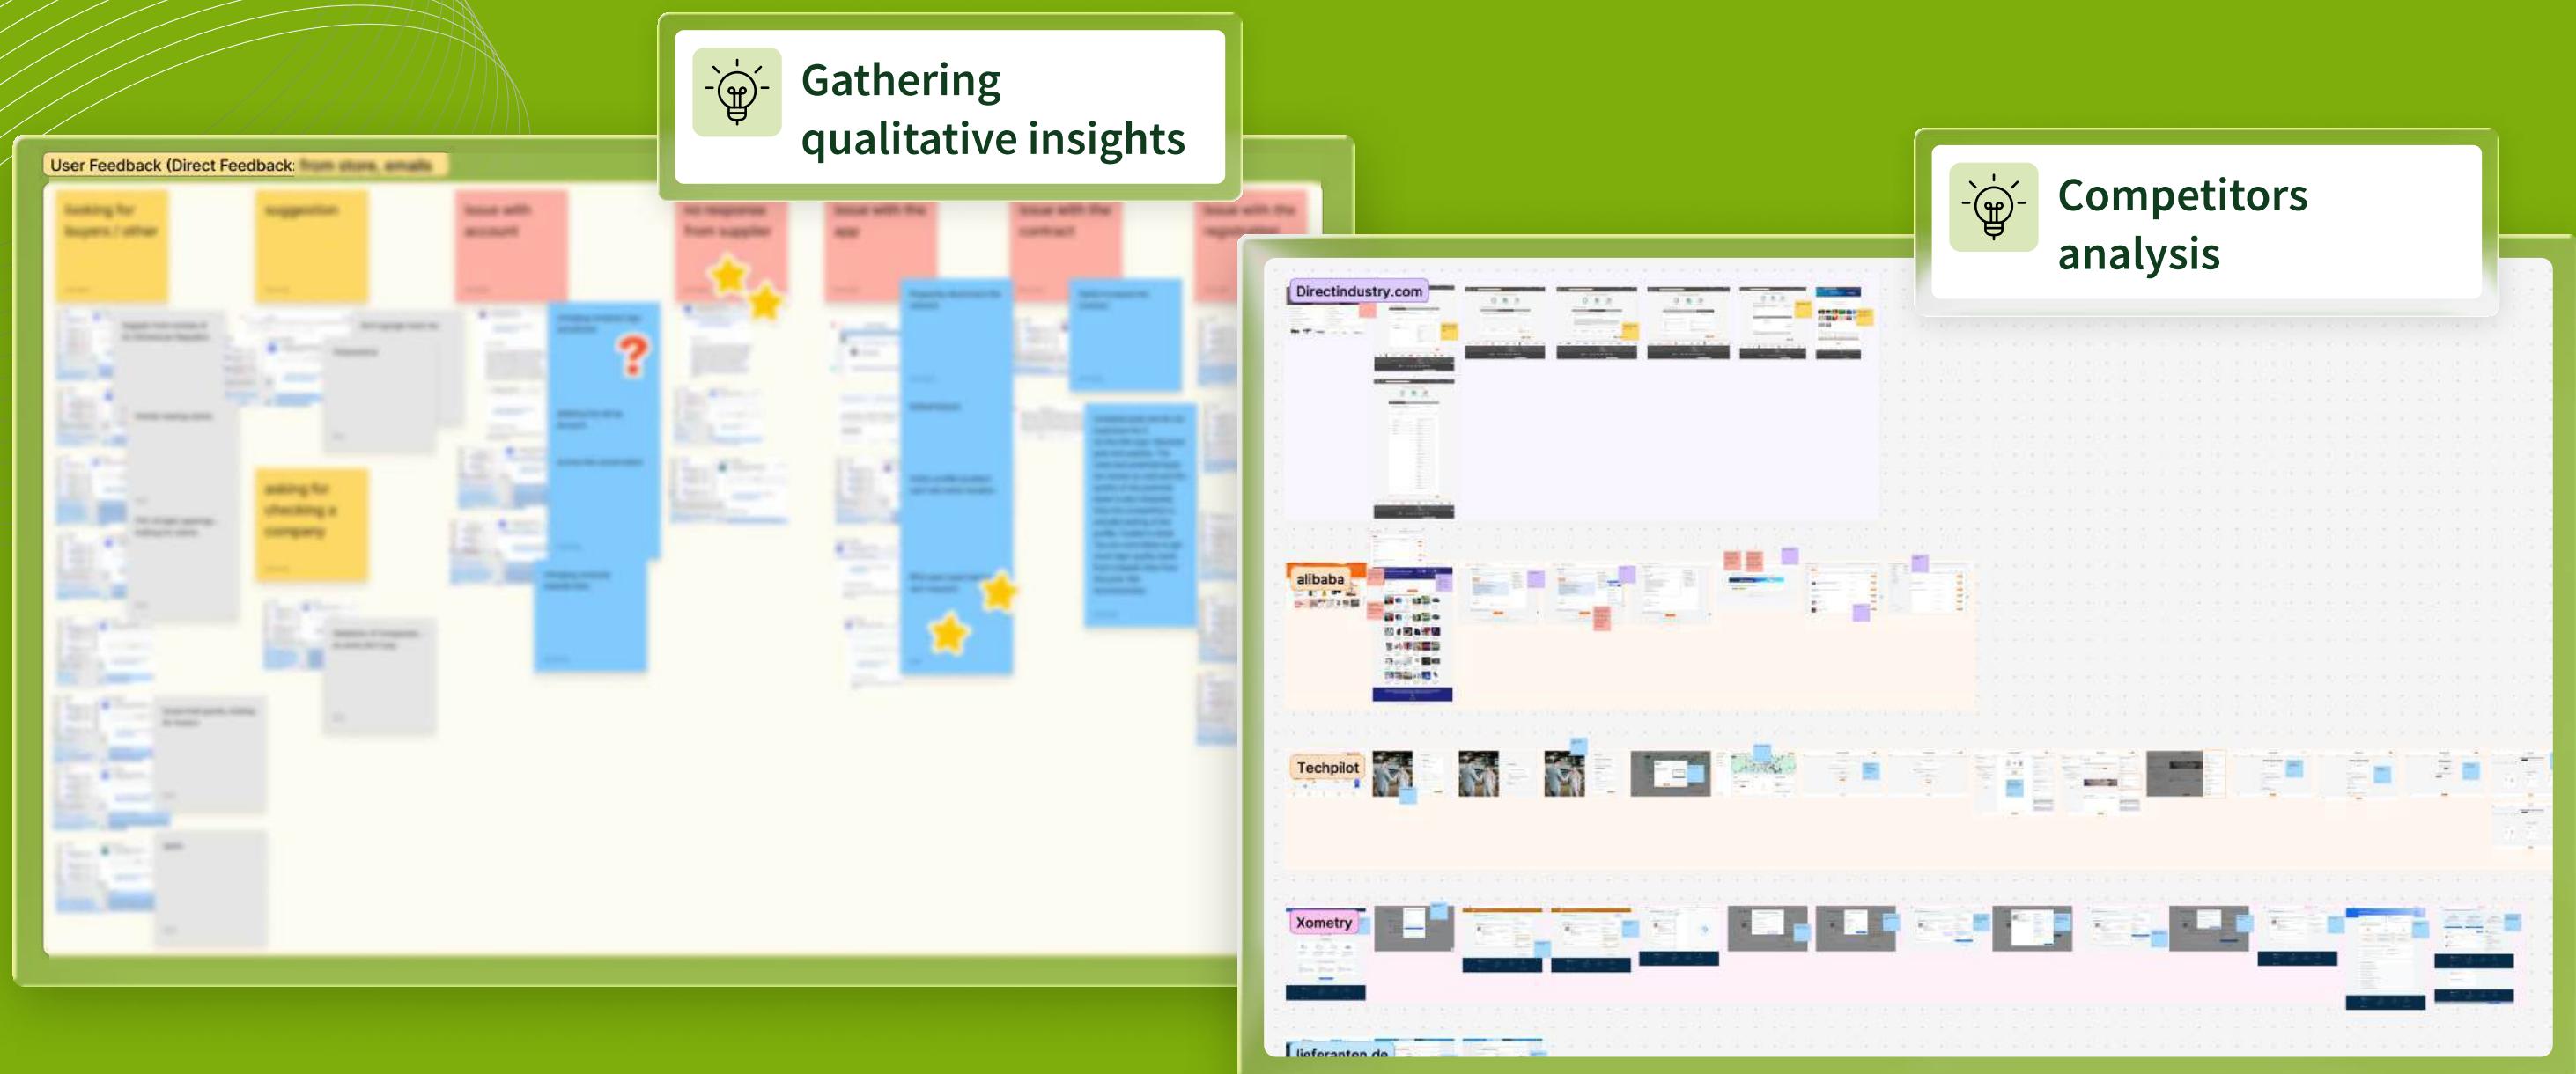

Quality As Retention

Better RFQs → better supplier ROI → lower supplier churn.

Reflection & Next Growth Bets

In B2B marketplaces, demand quality is a growth metric. Designing for it directly influences retention, revenue, and long-term liquidity.

Category-specific RFQ

Using historical performance data to optimize by category.

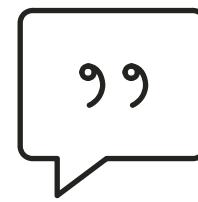

Adaptive guidance

Tailoring the experience to first-time vs. repeat buyers.

Feedback loop

Showing supplier engagement to close the loop with buyers post-submission.

Improving RFQ quality functioned as a supplier retention lever, not just a conversion win.
